MATRIMONIAL MELVIN.

MISERIES OF A MAINE MAN WHO HAS BURIED TWO WIVES AND HAS THREE LEFT.

[Cor. Boston Herald.]

BANGOR, Jan. 21, 1882.

Citizens of Penobscot and Aroostook counties have been somewhat excited during the past week by a discussion of the adventures of one Thomas Jefferson Melvin of Monticello. Mr. Melvin has been somewhat addicted to matrimony during his sixty years of life. Two wives who enjoyed his affections have gone to their rest, and three are alive who have at various times lived with him in the same relation. Through the efforts of these enterprising ladies, Mr. Melvin has come into trouble and secured some national reputation or notoriety. He has been in jail twice and libelled twice without process of law, and he is now a free citizen and living in peace and quiet at his farm home in the wilds of Aroostook. The history of his marital adventures and the troubles to which they subjected him, may be of general interest, and as there is a prospect that they may become a subject for international arbitration, they are here briefly sketched.

PARTNERS FOR THREE DAYS.

Four years ago Mr. Melvin found himself a widower, having consigned to the dust, already, two wives. He sought out and married a lady with the historic name of Mrs. Harris. She was not the mythical character who shared the confidence of Sairey Gamp, but a plump, rosy and accomplished widow of Monticello. For some reason not stated and not attainable, their relations as husband and wife were destined to be short-lived. On the third day of the honeymoon, Mr. Melvin drove his bride back to her father's house and formally relinquished all claims to her charms and affections. He resumed at once his state of single blessedness. Three weeks later Melvin drew up a libel for divorce from his latest partner, alleging as ground, several charges not much to the latter's credit. When the matter was laid before Judge Libby at the September term of Court, the accusations not being substantiated, the divorce was denied. At the February Court, 1880, Mrs. Melvin assumed the offensive, and filed a libel for a divorce on the ground that her husband had totally deserted her and had made slanderous charges against her in his application for divorce. This attempt to effect a legal separation, however met with as little success as the former, for the divorce was denied by Judge Symonds.

A PROVINCIAL VENTURE.

The two separated partners allowed things to remain in statu quo until last June, when Melvin crossed over the boundary line into New Brunswick and there married Mrs. Adelaide Burns, a resident of Victoria county. When information of this reached Mrs. Harris she renewed her petition for a legal separation and was successful, Judge Virgin, of the Supreme Court, granting her an absolute divorce at the September term. A few weeks thereafter Mr. Melvin got tired of his provincial wife and returned to his home on this side of the border. His marriage in New Brunswick was held to be void, because at the time it was solemnized he had a legal wife living.

MORE YANKEE BLISS.

The legal wife having obtained a divorce, Mr. Melvin found himself an unmarried man again in the eyes of the law, and he decided to again take his chances in the lottery of marriages. He proposed to Miss Fletcher, a sister of a former wife, and was accepted. Having married her, the newly wedded pair lived happily together until January 1, 1882.

IMPRISONMENT AND ABDUCTION.

On the first day of this year, Deputy Sheriff W. H. Estabrook made a call at the house and presented a warrant for Melvin's arrest, sworn out by a son of Mrs. Burns, of New Brunswick, charging him with bigamy in marrying Miss Fletcher. Melvin was made a prisoner and carried to Fort Fairfield, where he was arraigned on the 3d inst., before Henry C. Perry, trial justice. On trial his attorney set up the defence that the marriage to Miss Fletcher was legally, as Melvin at the time of contracting it, had no legal wife living and undivorced. This being evident, Melvin was acquitted. Just after the trial he was again arrested on a warrant sworn out by the same party, charging him with bigamy in marrying Mrs. Burns while Mrs. Harris his former wife, was still living and undivorced. Melvin was again arraigned but the attorney for the defense contended that the marriage to Mrs. Burns, if it ever took place at all, was solemnized in New Brunswick, and therefore it was a crime over which the courts of this State had no jurisdiction. Justice Perry, being undecided, reserved his decision until the next morning, and in the meantime left Melvin in the custody of Estabrook, who took him to the Collins House in Fort Fairfield and assigned him room No. 23 for the night. About half-past one A. M. Locke, clerk of the hotel, was awakened by a noise outside, and opening the door was met by five men in disguise. Their faces were painted, their hats drawn over their eyes and other means used to prevent recognition. One of the gang inquired, "Is Melvin confined in this house?" Being answered in the affirmative he demanded to know the number of his room and ordered the key to be given up. Both demands being refused the gang bound Locke hand and foot, put a pistol to his head and threatened to blow his brains out unless he gave up the key. He finally complied, and the door of No. 23 was soon unbolted. But Melvin in the meantime was not asleep. He had braced his bed against the door, and seemed determined to prevent an entrance. After a few efforts, however, the door gave way to the strength of the gang and Melvin, being unarmed, was at their mercy. Allowing him barely time to put on his pantaloons, they gagged and hand-cuffed their helpless victim and dragged him, with bare head and naked feet, down two flights of stairs to the door. There they threw him on a horse sled, and though the night was one of the coldest of the winter, drove him a distance of three miles to the boundary line between Fort Fairfield and New Brunswick. The cries of Melvin, who had loosened the gag were heard all along the road. At the boundary they met one Fitzherbert, a New Brunswick constable, who had a readiness a warrant for Melvin's arrest. Fitzherbert took Melvin into custody, and so kept him until the following day, when our persecuted friend was a third time arraigned on a charge of bigamy before a New Brunswick magistrate. On this he was found guilty and bound over to the June term of the county court. Failing to give the required bond he was committed to Andover jail, a wooden structure, but sufficiently ironed and barred to confine ordinary prisoners. Melvin, on arriving at the jail, instructed ex-Congressman Llewellyn Powers to act as his attorney and bring his case to the attention of the State Department. On the 11th of January a memorial setting forth all the facts herein narrated was sent to Washington.

AT LIBERTY AGAIN.

A new hitch comes in the case now, for Melvin is again in Monticello, living peaceably with his wife. On Wednesday morning last he walked out of jail, and crossing the boundary, breathed once more the air of freedom. How he escaped is not known and he will not tell. Some think that the authorities became frightened and liberated him to avoid complications; others hold that he effected his own escape. When questioned about the manner of his escape he declined to give any particulars. He declared, however, that no man could get out of the jail without assistance. He knows one of the gang who abducted him, and says they were all provincials. Melvin is sixty years of age, and has a well tanned face and sandy beard. He is not a handsome man, and yet he seems to find favor with the fair sex.

NEW MAGAZINES.

In the February number of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW, Prof. Geo. P. Fisher of the Yale Divinity School, whose writings on the supernatural origin of Christianity and on ecclesiastical history are well known, comes to the defence of the Christian Religion against the attacks of modern doubt and fidelity. No abler or more eminent advocate for the orthodox faith could be summoned into the controversy that has lately been waged on this high theme, and it is not too much to say that Prof. Fisher justifies every expectation by the vigor and clearness with which he handles the subject. He disclaims, however, the position of a debater, and makes no direct reference to Col. Ingersoll's assaults, although he necessarily deals with the objections so brilliantly and audaciously presented by that doughty combatant. He proceeds in a very orderly manner to maintain a series of positions in regard to the origin, essential character and beneficent effects of the Christian faith, which are intended in themselves to furnish the answer to all objections and cavils. In the first place he takes advantage of the position that Christianity is no new thing whose present existence calls for justification or apology. It is inwrought with the very fibre and substance of the best part of modern institutions and civilization, and has contributed more than any other force to making them what they are. We are impressively invited to imagine what they would have been without its agency. The difficulties which it presents, some of them of a very perplexing character, are frankly acknowledged, and differences of interpretation and understanding are alluded to as something inseparable from the action of the human mind in dealing with any system, complex in its details and bearings, however simple in its character and purpose. The idea that Christianity has been a bane to mankind is very effectually disposed of by an appeal to history and the experience of the race. In tracing the development of Divine Revelation and the gradual establishment of the religion of which Christianity is the consummation, Prof. Fisher gives a very broad interpretation to the idea of inspiration in the writings which contain its record and its precepts. Thereby he is enabled to meet with skill and effect some of the most telling arguments of the skeptic and the infidel. He claims, for instance, that the Divine method was to select a chosen people and lead them gradually up to the plane upon which the fullness of truth could be revealed to them with a possibility of being received and propagated. There was no sudden transformation of human nature, no violent sweeping away of old institutions and miraculous introduction of a new system, to which there must be a sudden and complete adaptation of mankind, equivalent almost to a new creation of the race but instead of that the chosen people were dealt with as men of their own era and those that surrounded or came in contact with them were similarly treated according to the requirements of the stage of progress reached from time to time. Hence the evils and abuses characteristic of ancient days were not suddenly rooted out, but were restrained and mitigated, while the forces were set at work which were to effect their final annihilation. This idea of the gradualness of revelation and the modified character of inspiration avoids a vast array of difficulties, but at the same time it approximates the process of religious development to that of political and social development and the growth of civilization generally. To many minds it will seem in no small measure to abolish the distinction between religious revelation and the general supervision of human affairs which all devout minds attribute to the Deity.

In dealing with the facts and doctrines of Christianity, Prof. Fisher displays much of the same breadth of method. While he resolutely maintains the genuineness and credibility of the miracles of the Saviour and the Divine Character of the Gospel record, his arguments regarding the authenticity, substantial harmony, and essential truth as to facts of the New Testament scriptures, are such as would be applied to any other controverted writings. Considered in that light they are well-nigh conclusive, but they are in some respects, quite different from what we have been accustomed to in religious controversy. The testimony of the disciples is tested as human testimony, and the records treated as subject to the ordinary accidents and incidents of literature. All this, of course, does not effect the essential character of Christian revelation or the religious belief and practice that is founded upon it. In dealing with these the learned writer has a strong case, and presents it with much vigor and force. His contribution to the controversy will be regarded with great interest, as furnishing the latest statement of orthodox views in what may be regarded as an authoritative form. Taking it as such, not the least part of its value will be found in the evidence it affords of the progressive character of the most strictly orthodox thought of the day.

Other articles in the February number of the Review are: Do the Spoils Belong to the Victor? by President Andrew D. White; A Remedy for Railway Abuses, by Isaac L. Rice; Republicanism in Virginia, by Senator John W. Johnston; and The Lancet and the Law, by Henry Bergh.

THE GENEVA AWARD

Webb, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal telegraphs that paper that one obstacle in the way of receiving favorable legislation on the Geneva award is that, as a matter of fact, there is no longer any specific fund in the Treasury known as "The Geneva award." The unexpended balance of the fifteen millions of dollars, in round numbers, was covered into the Treasury by Secretary Sherman in 1877 a few weeks after he assumed control of the Treasury Department. The fund had for some years been kept separate, but Mr Sherman for reasons which were not fully explained at the time, chose to cover this large sum into the Treasury inasmuch as Congress did not make any definite disposition of it. As a matter of fact Mr Sherman canceled the equivalent amount of five per cent bonds and destroyed them so that the bonded debt of the Government was reduced that amount by this process of covering in. Whatever payments Congress or any commission or court appointed by it may decide shall be due to the war premium claimants, to the exculpated cruisers, or to the underwriters, will have to be paid out of an appropriation hereafter to be made by Congress.

The House Committee on the Judiciary has decided the matter of the award by agreeing to report a bill which is hostile to the underwriters. This bill will provide for referring the question of the award to a court whether the present Court of Claims or a court to be specially constituted for the purpose has not yet been determined. The court is to be instructed to pay the amounts in the following order: 1 To exculpated cruisers 2 to war premium claimants. And the Court is to be directed to refuse to recognize the claims of the underwriters.

Judge Porter's Argument and Its Effect on the Prisoner."

Personal Appearance and Characteristics of Judge Porter.

[Special to The Boston Journal]

WASHINGTON Jan 23 Judge Porter will occupy [illegible] of to-morrow, and possibly may not conclude his speech before Wednesday. The audience was disappointed in his argument to-day, in that it was not so overtoned as had been expected. The lawyers say that is a powerful jury speech for whom alone it was intended. Judge Porter is a good looking man, about middle size and finely proportioned. He has a clear complexion, which is inclined to be ruddy, and a round face, which, with the approaching years is losing some thing of its fullness. His countenance has a very thoughtful expression, and his features are strongly marked. He is probably near sixty, and time has left its imprint in his gray hairs. His eyes are deep set, and are what Mr Oscar Wilde would call soulful. His hair brushed back from a high forehead is worn long. He was dressed in black. He is in feeble health as was very evident from his language and his voice though it became strong, vigorous and clear as he progressed. It was husky and harsh in the opening, and grew thin and feeble at the close. At the out set he spoke with considerable effort, the effort which a man in feeble health makes when entering upon a difficult task. Judge Porter has a reputation as a master of sarcasm, denunciation and invective. His reputation is well deserved. His opening sentences were a severe denunciation of the assassin and his sketch of Guiteau's life and character was one of remarkable power and will read in future school books like a page from Macaulay. It was expected that he would be argumentative. He probably will be, later in his speech. The introduction was illustrative and bore what is sensive, but he brushed aside by a good many cobwebs which the defense have woven about the case and to narrow he will be ready for the main portion of his work. Probably no man except the assassin could have sat unmoved at the torrent of withering denunciation which the leading attorney of the Government poured upon him. Judge Porter's utterances cannot be called good, his voice is not of largest tones is somewhat sharp and strident, and in the passages which he seeks most strongly to emphasize its lower tones become a hiss, and the concluding portions of the sentences are lost, except to the jurors whom he immediately faces. He speaks with great deliberation, and while annoyed at the impertinent interruptions of the prisoner, and still more at his dangerous interruptions of Scoville (Guiteau to be an argument in the midst of his speech) he turned the interruptions generally to good account. Guiteau had himself injury several of his interruptions, for Porter made them serve as a peg upon which he hung argument denunciation and invective, and it was noticed that Guiteau was much more ill at ease in his dock to-day than he has been. Indeed, the jailor says his courage is failing, that he is unwilling to speak of the result of the trial and that he is losing both his confident lookand tone

The Harbor Commissioners of San Francisco have made the unpleasant discovery that the piles of the sea wall at that port are rapidly being destroyed by the toredo, some of them being completely eaten off. This is found to be the case with piles that have been down but a little more than two years. As there are upwards of 35,000 of these piles the depredations of these insects are a matter of great magnitude. Efforts will be made to discover a remedy.

The Democratic State Treasurer of New York has appointed Mr Tilden's "old Eddy Agar" to be his deputy, to the disgust of many party friends in the Western part of the State

The charge of Judge Depue and the verdict of the jury in the Graves murder case in Newark are of special interest in connection with the Guiteau trial. The plea of insanity was set up in behalf of the murderer, and there seemed to be no massive sufficient to impel a sane man to commit the crime. Graves, a depraved old man of sixty, killed a boy of thirteen, for no other reason than to revenge himself upon the boy's father, whom he had threatened to shoot, and who had procured his arrest and confinement in jail for a short term as a punishment for the threat. The Judge charged the jury that it was the settled law in New Jersey that if an accused man had sufficient mind to distinguish between right and wrong, and could control his conduct under ordinary circumstances, he could not acquit himself on a plea of irresistible impulse. Thereupon the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

Shrewd politicians think that they see indications that Mr. Tilden is at the bottom of the Democratic quarrel over Bodwell in Ohio, and that he will profit by the differences between the Democratic leaders in Indiana.

Plans are in preparation for five or six million dollars worth of buildings at Winnipeg, and it looks as if somebody would get hurt by the real estate speculation now dominant there.

A California paper says that the army of the unemployed, so large in that State two or three years ago has disappeared. The decline of Kearneyism prepared one to believe such reports.

The town of Cobourg in Canada is so troubled with rats that the city fathers have appointed two days in which a general pouncing of the rodents is to take place by means of phosphorus.

A London solicitor recently announced in the Times his intention of engaging two young women as writers in his office, with the view of testing their capabilities "as mechanical writers, but as intelligent brain workers in the law."

Gold at a premium in Paris rather annoys our French friends, who say that it is because of that upstart United States. It is at times difficult to procure twenty francs pieces from the Bank of France, and all bills are paid in paper and in an infinity of five-franc pieces.

Four years ago a Canadian farmer went to Manitoba and took up some land. Having performed his settling duties he returned to his old home with the intention of going back again, but did not. Another party settled on the same lot and has since sold it to a third person, or $50,000, a town having been laid out on the land.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer has discovered a remedy for the worms that play so great havoc among currant bushes. The ordinary black ant is an inveterate enemy of the currant worm. He encourages ant colonies near the bushes, and the result has been that while his neighbors had few or no currants his crop was abundant.

The present Freshman class at Harvard is said to be distinguished because it is the smallest class that has entered Harvard for several years, because the standard of its scholarships is unusually high, and because its members, notwithstanding the example set by former Freshman classes, have refused to go in a body to a theatre and there disgrace themselves.

The largest steel sailing vessel ever constructed was launched a few days ago at Belfort, England. She is named the Garfield, after the late President. The Garfield, which is 2220 tons register, is 295 feet in length, 24 feet 9 inches depth and 41 feet, breadth. She has been built for the White Star Line, and is intended for the Australian and California trades.

No doubt now exists that the burning of the Ohio State Asylum two months ago was the work of incendiaries, for two of the youthful inmates, named Gwinn and Dignon have made a full confession. They say that they were incited to the fiendish act by David Goodrich, a mulatto boy about 18 years of age who promised to pay them the glittering sum of one dollar and fifty cents if they would place in imminent danger the lives of about seven hundred associates and attendants, to say nothing of property which cannot be replaced for much less than $400,000

DO YOU KNOW OUR FAMILIES!

Thousands have families growing up around them who, to property depends upon the continuance of a father's life. Should he die, the income would cease. The children must be withdrawn from school, the mother and the eldest children must resort to every expedient merely to sustain the family; and in many cases, with the greatest exertion this cannot be done; the wife will return to the factory for support; and the children, separated, must go to the street to seek work, and the younger to be distributed among friends, and such histories are of constant occurrence. THE JURY RETIRE

GUILTY!

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. The court room [illegible] crowded long before the open[illegible] of the court this morning. The counsel [illegible] came in coming in and the [illegible] declared in session till a [illegible] Judge Porter entered looking much better than [illegible] As soon as the prisoner opened [illegible] my sister has [illegible] some silly talk in Chicago, [illegible] she's not a lawyer."

Judge Porter Resumes His Argument.

[illegible] resumed his argu[illegible] by the falling snow [illegible] of the weather from which doubtless [illegible] could not help but feel it necessary [illegible] to supply his original inten[illegible] to the intelligence and [illegible] to supply his defects [illegible] to refer to Guiteau over the dry [illegible] evidence, telling it imperatively [illegible] that case should be [illegible] as soon as possible [illegible] would simply touch upon a few [illegible] of the evidence.

A Moral Imbecile

a farmer of morbid projects, says Spitzka. Why are the most of mankind poor? Because of morbid projects. Yet do we pronounce the majority of mankind insane? What does he say of this prisoner's sanity on the second of July? Probably insane. Do you propose, gentlemen of the jury, to bring in a verdict that he was probably insane? Was he sane or insane, that is the question? What does he say of the prisoner as a lawyer? He calls him a third rate shyster in a criminal court. I suppose Scoville can tell you what that means; I cannot.

Well, some of your clients can tell you what that is," retorted the prisoner.

Referring to the references by Col. Reed to Charlotte Corday, Judge Porter said it was left to Reed to make the discovery and announce to this Court and to the world that Charlotte Corday was insane. Reviewing the circumstances of Charlotte Corday's life and death, Porter contrasted her act of patriotism with Guiteau's foul murder. In the most eloquent and stirring sentences the prisoner was roused almost to fury and bellowed like an infuriated beast, at times completely drowning the speaker's voice, "God Almighty will curse you, Porter, you miserable whelp. You can't make the American people believe I am not a patriot. To-day I suffer in bonds as a patriot and God will curse you in a hair of my head is injured."

Pausing a moment Porter said:

Contrast the Conduct of this vindictive, cowardly wretch with Charlotte Corday, who walked peacefully to the scaffold with her hands folded over the crosses upon her breast and the serene smile that denotes her willingness to suffer death for her country and the patriotism which instigated her act.

"I am not afraid to die either," shouted the prisoner. "You may put my body in the ground if you can but I tell you this Nation will go down in blood if you harm a hair in my head."

Next, Porter compared the prisoner to Wilkes Booth and showed the latter to be almost a patriot compared with the cowardly assassin now on trial: For Booth was actuated by a mistaken motive of patriotism and was a man of manhood and gentleness; but this sneaking, cowardly wretch, who can plead for his victim's death only his own safety at the same time, murdered his man for revenge.

Guiteau—"I shot my man in broad daylight, and don't you forget it."

Pressing the assertion that Guiteau was actuated by revenge and a desire for notoriety, Judge Porter compared him to a noted criminal in Europe. I don't recall his name, but he said "I am the ugliest man in Europe."

"Well, you wasn't there," interrupted Guiteau, "you'll be the ugliest man in history though."

He said, continued Porter, "I would rather be the ugliest man in Europe and have notoriety than remain in the ranks of mediocrity."

For the next half hour there was one continual

Stream of Interruptions

and abuse from the prisoner. A score of times he denounced Porter as a liar, varying the expression, as adjectives suggested themselves. His vindictive disposition showed itself as never before and for once his cunning was merged in his angry spite and as Judge Porter piled up the Ossa of invective upon the Pelion of denunciation, the prisoner unwittingly emphasized and corroborated the diagnosis of depravity and wicked heartedness which the counsel was, with such telling effect, pronouncing upon him. "You know that's an absolutely despicable, wicked, devilish lie," finally shouted Guiteau, stammering with rage.

At 12:30 recess was taken for thirty minutes.

After Recess.

After recess Scoville gained the ear of the Court to state that he interrupted Judge Porter but once and Porter this forenoon but twice, and each time in a respectful manner. He did not propose to interrupt again unless it was warranted, and he thought he was entitled to more respectful consideration than had yet been accorded him. Guiteau followed suit with the announcement that he should not interrupt, unless it was warranted, but he harangue which he seemed about to start upon was summarily cut short by Judge Cox, who commanded him to keep quiet.

Judge Porter Resumed;

There is one man between you and the grave of the slaughtered President who knows whether this defence is a sham one or not.

Guiteau—"He's a true defence and you know it, Judge Porter."

The truth will, however, burst forth and reach the consciousness of any one; if from no other source it will make its way from the murderer himself. Judge Porter then read from a letter of the prisoner to his father, in which he said: "For years I was haunted with the idea I was cut out for some great mission, but now I am convinced it was but a devilish delusion, and I renounce my over-weening vanity and egotism."

Guiteau—"Well, I've changed my mind since then, that was ten years ago."

Later, reading from Guiteau's criticism upon the religious and moral growth of the past six thousand years, Judge Porter said: Could have pronounced a more sinister judgment?

Guiteau—"Judas would have employed you as his attorney, you big liar."

"His whole life," said Judge Porter, "was in accord, and all the evidence substantiated the assumption that revenge and the morbid desire for notoriety actuated the prisoner. How thoroughly he had read up the noted crimes, and how familiar he had shown himself to be with their defence.

Where did he get that with which to soften the too harsh definition of too hideous crime? From reading Shakespeare, and his models were those characters in whose portraits the great student of human nature had portrayed the very intensity of human passions. Judge Porter concluded at 3 o'clock.

Judge Cox's Charge.

Judge Cox at 3:15 P. M. proceeded to deliver his charge to the jury. He commenced by saying that the Constitution provides in all criminal prosecutions that the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury in the state or district where the crime shall be committed; that he shall be informed of the cause and nature of the accusation against him; that he shall be confronted with the witnesses against him that he shall have compulsory process to obtain witnesses in his favor and that he shall have the assistance of counsel in his defence.

Those provisions were made for the protection of the innocent from injustice and oppression, and it was only by their faithful observance that guilt or innocence could be fairly ascertained. Every accused person was presumed to be innocent till the accusation was proved. What difficulty and trouble the law had been administered in the present case the jurors has been daily witnesses. It was, however, a consolation to think that not one of those secret guarantees of the Constitution had been broken in the case of the accused.

At last the long chapter of proof was ended, the task of the advocate was done, and now rested with the jury to determine the issue between public justice and the prisoner at the bar. No one could feel more keenly than himself the great responsibility of his duties, and he felt he could only discharge them by close adherence to the law as laid down by the highest authorities. Before proceeding further he wished to which had taken place pending the closing argument.

The prisoner had frequently taken occasion to proclaim his public opinion as evinced by the press and correspondence of one or two simple interruptions. The jury immediately retired and many of the spectators left the room. After the jury had been out about twenty minutes a recess was taken till half-past five.

at his request was allowed soon after the jury left the court room to retire to a little room he has occupied since the trial began as waiting room during recess. Before leaving the court room he evinced considerable nervousness, but on getting away to comparative seclusion his usual composure and assurance soon returned.

He sent out for some apples with which he treated his attendants, meanwhile chatting familiarity and good naturedly. He was asked what he thought the jury would do and replied "I think they will acquit me, or disagree don't you?" Within 10 minutes after recess had been taken the jury called to the bailiff in waiting that they were ready with their verdict. They were informed that a recess had been taken and Judge Cox had left the court room, so they remained in their room till the Court reassembles. The rumor that was quickly spread from one to another and the excited crowd surged back into the court room. First came the prisoner with quick nervous step, and as he seated himself in the dock, perhaps for the last time, the light of a solitary candle fell full upon his face and disclosed its more than usual pallor

Not a tremor of limb or movement of muscles in his face was observable as he threw back his head and fixed his gaze upon the door through which the jury were to enter. Judge Cox soon took his seat, the crier called "order" and the jury at 1:35 filed slowly into their seats.

Every Sound was Hushed

save the voice of the clerk as he proceeded to the foreman the usual inquiry. Clear and distinct came the reply, "We have." "What is your verdict? guilty or not guilty?" With equal distinctness came the reply,

"Guilty as Indicted."

Then the pent up feelings of the crowd found expression in an uproarious demonstration of applause and approval. "Order," shouted the bailiff. Scoville and the counsel for the prosecution were simultaneously upon their feet. Scoville attempted to address the Court, but the District Attorney shouted, "Wait till we have the verdict complete and in due form of law." Order was at length restored and the clerk, addressing the jury, said: Your foreman says "guilty as indicted, so say you all?" "We do," they all responded. Another demonstration of approval followed this announcement, but not so long as the first. Scoville still upon his feet demanded a poll of the jury, which was granted, and each juror was called by name and each in a firm voice promptly responded, "Guilty." As the last name was called

The Prisoner Shrieked,

"My blood will be upon the heads of that jury don't you forget it." Scoville again addressed the Court, saying, "Your Honor I do not desire to forfeit any rights I may have under the law and practice in this district. If there is anything I ought to do now to save those rights, I would be indebted to Your Honor to indicate it to me." Judge Cox in reply assured him he should have every opportunity that the charge would be furnished to him in print. To-morrow, and he would be accorded all the time allowed by law within which to file exceptions, and would also be entitled to four days within which to move a arrest of judgment. Guiteau, (who from the moment the Judge began the delivery of his charge has dropped complete by his air of flippant arrogance and sat with rigid features and compressed lips) called out in tones of desperation: "God will avenge this outrage!" Judge Cox then turned to the jury and said: "Gentlemen of the jury:—I cannot express too many thanks for the manner in which you have discharged your duty. You have richly merited the thanks of your countrymen, and I feel assured you will take with you to your homes the approval of your consciences. With thanks, gentlemen of the jury, I dismiss you."

With this announcement the Court was declared adjourned. The crowd quickly left the room and the prisoner, gesticulating with manacled hands, was led out. As he passed the reporters' table he leaned over and called out to acquaintances "Court in banc will reverse this business." His appearance was that of a man deeply moved with indignation at some outrage or indignity which had been put upon him. While being put in the van the crowd upon the pavement yelled and shouted themselves hoarse in mockery of the prisoner's constant boast, "The American press and people are all with me." The van was quickly driven away followed till out of sight by the jeers and yells of the crowd. Scoville will probably file a motion in arrest of judgment and for a new trial on exceptions.

The officer took a revolver and and cartridges and a razor from Farrand. He has been on the track of the prisoner ten days. Coroner Mayo, of Skowhegan, in whose hands the warrants were originally placed, arrived to-day. We are informed that in consequence of the extreme cold weather, the demands upon the Fuel Society are pressing, the calls upon the distributors in the several wards having greatly increased within a few days. We hear of quite a number of persons whose ears were badly frost-bitten while at the fire.

On the day of the obsequies of Dr. Pond, prayer was offered at the house by his pastor, Rev. H. L. Griffin, before the removal of the remains to the church. The students in a body accompanied the precious dust, followed by the pall-bearers and the family, to the church. At the grave, the Trustees of the Seminary, the officers of the church, with others, were thanked by the Rev. J. E. Pond for kind and loving attentions. The date of Dr. Pond's first article in the "Panoplist," alluded to in our article of Monday, was in 1814. His sermons in the "National Preacher" were published years after.

POOR "PRESS" JONES. The Overseers of the Poor, having been informed that "Press" Jones, who has been missed from our streets for a few weeks past, was in a camp near Field's Pond, in Orrington, in a freezing and starving condition, Chairman Potter, with commendable promptness, started out with a team to his relief, taking with him a supply of provisions. On account of the badly drifted condition of the roads he was unable to reach him. Mr. Potter then hired a man to take the food on a hand-sled and endeavor to find him, but on reaching the camp it was found that he had left for some house. It is hoped that the unfortunate man found a place of refuge before freezing.

ART ASSOCIATION ENTERTAINMENT. Holders of membership cards and course tickets to Special Lectures of the Art Club, will see by advertisement this morning, that by presenting them at Bugbee's next Monday they can get secured seats to the closing entertainment by Madame Ricard and Miss Ella M. Chamberlin. The Marlboro Journal says: "There was another large audience at the Town Hall last night to hear the famous Mme. Ricard in her readings and personations. In her readings, she gave evidence of great ability, and versatility of unusual excellence. In her costume personation is best shown what her capabilities are. Her Mme Janauschek as "Lady Macbeth," was a study. Her Charlotte Cushman was immense, and to those who have seen the great actress the effect must have been electrical, so fine was the impersonation. Her Ben Butler was right there."

EVOLUTION? Mr. Editor:—A curious sight was witnessed one day last week by residents near the open "skating rink" on Court street. A fine large grey cat seemed ambitious to share he pastimes of the betters, and for an hour or so disported himself on the ice with a grace and zeal that were most entertaining to see. He not only turned somersaults, and rolled down the bank, and tossed a morsel of ice back and forth over the sheet, with every evidence of as keen a sense of winter fun as any boy of them all, but he actually seemed to have taken a lesson from what was done at the rink and learned to skate. To be sure he lacked the customary waiter at ells on his feet which Young America has been wont to consider the indispensable adjuncts to a cat's skating, but without them he probably came as near to that manly art as a quadruped can, and demonstrated that they are unnecessary. He would put his forefeet together a little advanced, and kick with his hind feet, propelling himself across the ice, and then turn and skate back again. Sometimes he varied the performance by climbing up on the snow bank at the side of the rink, and sliding down on all four feet together, face foremost, and occasionally would snatch up his cold paws and give them a few hasty laps with his tongue, as a boy blows his stiffening fingers to warm them. Such an imitative genius deserves encouragement, and doubtless all the boys in the neighborhood will henceforth behave with the utmost consideration for his owner's felin's.

A PLEASANT WEDDING.

It is our pleasant privilege to congratulate a member of our Staff, Mr. Edward P. Boutelle, Assistant Editor of the WHIG AND COURIER, upon the happy event of his marriage with Miss Jessie M., daughter of George A. Lowell, Esq., one of the leading citizens of Calais. The wedding, which was private, took place on Wednesday morning, Jan. 25th, at the residence of the bride's parents, in the presence of the relatives and a few immediate friends of the bride and groom. The marriage service was very felicitously performed by Rev. W. W. Lovejoy, of Calais, and after the ceremony a half hour was passed in extending cordial congratulations to the happy couple. The bridal gifts were numerous and beautiful evidences of the affectionate regard of a large circle of relatives and friends, and among them we may mention an elegant silver swinging ice-pitcher, stand and goblet, presented by "The Boys of THE WHIG OFFICE." On leaving the family homestead some of the young folks invoked "good luck" by the custom of throwing rice after the bride, and a pleasant party accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Boutelle to the St. Stephen depot, where they took the train for this city and arrived at the Bangor House last evening. They will start this morning on a trip to Boston, New York, etc., and on their return will make their residence at the Bangor House. We express the feeling of a host of friends in wishing them abundant happiness throughout the voyage of life.

Mapleville Notes.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

It commenced snowing Saturday night and continued until Sunday afternoon, about eight inches having fallen. At the present (Monday night) the wind is blowing hard while the weather is very cold. The roads are in a hard condition, consequently there is but little teaming.

The Melvin kidnaping case has attracted considerable attention here, not from any sympathy with the bigamist, but because of the outrage committed at Fort Fairfield. Public opinion seems to be that Melvin deserves severe punishment for his misdeeds, but that it ought to be inflicted in a regular and legal manner. I hear to-day that he has been re-arrested since his return to the American side, but there are so many conflicting statements concerning him that it is hard getting at the facts of the case. It is stated that he has been married five times, two of his wives being dead.

One or two wealthy individuals recently undertook to make a little legal trouble for the school teacher at this place, but quickly discovered that the "law" as expounded in the blacksmith shops and on the street corners did not at all coincide with the statute law of Maine and the decisions of the Supreme Court; thereupon they subsided. People who undertake to interfere with school teachers engaged in the legal discharge of their duties, need to look sharp or they may find themselves in a fix.

The steam shingle mill of Hogan & Ketchum & Co., is now running night and day. Large quantities of cedar "drift" are being hauled to this mill for which $5 00 per thousand are paid. For the past few weeks Mr. Hogan has been confined to his house by sickness.

James Archibald, Esq., who for the past year has been practising law at this place is about to remove to Presque Isle. The law business doesn't seem to be very extensive here owing to the nearness to Houlton. VAH.

Now upon motion of the libellee and further consideration by the court it is ordered that the case be continued to the next term and the libellee is then to be heard providing he complies with an order of court for the payment of $50 to libellant, and in the meantime he is to have access to the children to see them on all proper occasions.

Ruth Brown and Christopher C. Gray. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff that the cow was her property and assessed damages one dollar.

I. W. Davis. Davis & Bailey.

James A. Greenacre vs. Frank W. Goodwin. The parties reside in Bangor, the plaintiff a commission merchant and dealer in fruits and produce, and the defendant at the time of the transaction out of which this suit arose, was running a steamer between Bangor and New York. The plaintiff's action was brought on an account annexed to recover for twenty-five tubs of butter delivered to defendant in May, 1881, a balance due of $107.43. The defendant says he bought the butter for a good article to sell in the New York market at an advance on nineteen cents a pound, the price he was to pay Greenacre; but when the butter was opened in New York it was found to be very poor and unfit for the table and he could get for it there only eleven cents a pound, the price for what is known to the trade as "baker's butter." The defendant brought the butter back to Bangor and returned it to the plaintiff. The plaintiff says that he at first refused to take the butter back, but afterwards did take it upon the defendant saying to him that he [plaintiff] should forfeit none of his legal rights by so doing. The plaintiff sold the butter for $139.76 and deducts this sum from $247.19, the price at 19 cents a pound, and sues for the balance. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $101 25.

WHERE IS HOME?

Home is where affection binds
Gentle hearts in unison,
Where the voices of all kind,
Holding sweet communion!

Home is where the heart can rest
Safe from darkening sorrow,
Where the friends we love can feel
Brighten every morrow!

Home is where the friends I mallove
To our hearts are given,
Where the blessings from above
Make it seem a heaven!

Home is where the sun will shine
In the skies above us,
Leaping brightly through the vine
I'm not by those who love us

Yes, the home where smiles of cheer
Wreathe the brows that greet us,
And the one of all most dear
Ever comes to meet us!

His wound is not serious, but he will be disabled for a time ——A civil suit has been commenced in Lewiston, as the result of a novel amour. A Lewiston girl wants a burly colored man to marry her, and the colored man has run away with the sheriffs at his heels He was a hostler in a Lewiston livery stable Aroostook.

A Houlton letter to the Boston Globe gives some further particulars of the kidnapping and escape of Melvin It is the general opinion that the New Brunswick officials became frightened at the turn affairs were taking and really let Melvin at liberty in his agreeing to keep quiet. Melvin is described as a rather ordinary looking man of about 50 years of age In answer to a correspondent he declined to state anything concerning his escape, but finally declared that the power of man could never get any one out of that jail." Being asked whether he believed his abductors were provincials or Americans he replied,

They were all provincials and one of them I know well 'His son, however, stated that one of the gang was known to live on this side of the line. Melvin is extremely reticent, and appears suspicious of all who approach him.

The Lewiston Journal says It is proposed by some of the friends of the temperance cause to hold a temperance convention of two days and evenings, in Portland some time in February Some of the principal temperance workers in the state have been invited to be present It is proposed to give a brief day or evening, each, to the Good Templars, the churches, Reform Clubs prohibition, etc

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'

Vegetable Balsamic

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable the discovery of which was the result of many years close study, in order to discover the cause the symptoms, and the cure—viz

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where the Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to Consumption, at its commencement is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the lungs, then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chill more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface and finally expel them from the system It facilitates expectoration

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy It opperates the stretch and the nauseating sensation which produced also by drying substances at last ring, but at the same time reduces the fever strengthens the patient and prevents the disease from spreading to the other organs.

Asthma is also cured by this valuable remedy, after all other remedies have been tried without effect.

Many persons have been cured of Dyspepsia by using a few bottles

Also for Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Pain in the Side, Back, Loins and Kidneys, this Elixir has no equal

For Children troubled with Worms, Colic, Croup, Canker in the Mouth, Stomach, or Bowels, this Elixir is highly recommended by those who have used it

Directions for use in different languages accompany each bottle

Price 25 cents, 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle
